Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a flash memory device, and more particularly, to a flash memory device and a method of programming the same. 2. Description of the Related Art As the number of memory cells of flash memory devices decreases, the operating margin of memory cells of the flash memory devices decreases. As a result, the flash memory devices become more sensitive to physical and electrical changes. One of the physical and electrical changes is a decrease in the threshold voltage due to the damage to the tunnel oxide layer. For example, a program/erase cycle performed several times or the latent wear in the tunnel oxide layer causes the damage to the tunnel oxide layer. Therefore, the threshold voltage of memory cells increases. However, the defective memory cell is not programmed into the erasing state even though the same signal voltage is applied thereto. In this case, in a read operation, an erroneous data may be read out from the memory cell. That is, since the defective memory cell is programmed into a different state, such as the erasing state, erroneous data may be read out during a read operation. Herein, the erroneous data may be an erasing state or a programming state. As described above, since the memory cell is damaged by the latent wear, several flash memory devices are required to secure the operating
